

VOLUNTEER WITH FNPf ON NUSA PENIDA ISLAND

- Release and protect endangered bird species
- Community education and development programs
- Habitat restoration

ABOUT NUSA PENIDA

Just 14km and 45 minutes by boat from Bali is the small unspoilt island of Nusa Penida. The island has beautiful beaches, amazing coral reefs, rocky hill terrain, sheer cliffs and traditional Balinese village culture (farming, seaweed production, traditional ikat weaving, and many temples).

ABOUT FNPf

FNPf has been running its conservation projects on Nusa Penida since 2004, with a wildlife focus on rebuilding populations of endangered Indonesian bird species (including Bali's emblem bird, the Bali Starling). FNPf converted Nusa Penida into a unique "island-wide bird sanctuary" where endangered birds live & breed safely. All 41 villages have passed a local regulation protecting birds from poachers.

In return, FNPf sponsors children to attend school and university; runs a community library; funds traditional dance classes; teaches sustainable farming; grows and freely distributes tree saplings for villages to build future incomes from agro-forestry; plants trees on degraded land to restore forests. Education and economic improvements that are in harmony with the environment enable the local communities to improve their wellbeing and participate in conservation. Trees reduce soil erosion, increase rainfall and provide economic benefit to residents and habitat for birds.

VOLUNTEER WITH FNPf

Volunteering with FNPf on Nusa Penida is a fun way to learn about conservation and community development, and a great way to meet traditional Balinese communities on a beautiful island.

Volunteers are responsible for their own vaccinations and should optionally bring anti-malarial prophylactics and medications, as well as cream for protection from mosquitoes and sun, plus medicines for common conditions such as diarrhea.

We suggest volunteers donate 3 - 4 hours per day.

Let us know if you have specialist skills that could help our work on Nusa Penida.
