

Project Area

The sanctuary which covers an area of 5km² radius from the Besikalung Temple.

It takes in Bali's largest remaining forest and is home to Leaf monkeys, Macaques, and many birds.

Since the sanctuary was created in early 2011 we have released White vented mynahs and Peaceful doves into the forest under the protection of the local community.

The sanctuary also borders one of Indonesia's UNESCO World Heritage protected sites.

We Need Your Support

To continue our wildlife conservation work and further develop the Besikalung Wildlife Sanctuary we need your support.

We need funding to conduct research and monitoring of the bird populations and their breeding activities. We can then use this information to lobby local government to introduce a range of legislation to support the sanctuary and so strengthen the traditional regulations. We also need funds to finish building a sanctuary information centre where the public can learn about conservation issues.

If you would like to donate please contact us or visit our website . Thank you.

For more information visit our website:
www.fnpf.org.

You can also find us on Facebook under FNPF Bali

Address: Jl. Bisma No. 3, Ubud
Bali, Indonesia 80571
Telephone: +62 361 977978

FRIENDS OF THE NATIONAL PARKS FOUNDATION

Habitat • Communities • Wildlife

www.fnpf.org

Besikalung Wildlife Sanctuary

The Sanctuary

FNPF has created a forest sanctuary for endangered birds and animals on the slopes of Mt Batukaru in central Bali.

The community asked FNPF to develop and run the sanctuary following the success of FNPF's Bali Bird Sanctuary, on the island of Nusa Penida, just off the coast of mainland Bali.

The committee who runs Besikalung Temple, and five villages and nine farmers groups who live and work in the area, have introduced traditional regulations which give protection to wildlife within the sanctuary.

The Besikalung project, which began in 2011, also includes tree planting and monitoring within the sanctuary as part of efforts to restore and protect the remaining forest.

We also run programs teaching the local community about conservation issues.

Who is FNPF?

FNPF is an Indonesian NGO working to protect wildlife and its habitat, at the same time supporting local communities.

Our projects, which respect the interdependence of wildlife, habitat and local people, have been internationally recognized by organizations such as the United Nations Development Programme, the Whitley Fund for Nature, and the Rainforest Action Network.

We operate seven sites across the Indonesian islands of Bali and Kalimantan. Our projects include wildlife care and rehabilitation, habitat protection, reforestation, the breeding and release of critically endangered birds, and environmental education.

We also provide local communities with income generating opportunities – including eco-tourism and organic farming – reducing their need to be involved in environmentally destructive activities, such as illegal logging and palm oil plantations.

Habitat • Communities • Wildlife

www.fnpf.org

Donate Now

FNPF receives no government funding and we rely solely on the generous support of our volunteers and donors to continue our work. To make a donation please visit our website www.fnpf.org.

Australian and US tax payers can make a tax deductible donation via one of our partners. See www.fnpf.org for more details.

Our donors include the Humane Society International (Australia), the Gibbon Foundation, the US Fish & Wildlife Service, and many others.

